VOLNEY WINCHELL, a well-known broker, long engaged in business in Springfield, Massachusetts, left that place ostensibly for New York, on business on the 5th inst., and had not been heard from up to the 20th. The suspicions of foul play common in such cases, are somewhat strengthened by the fact that quite a number of persons who had intrusted large sums of money to Mr. Winchell's hands, are becoming disconsolated at his long absence.

IN CLARK county, Va., one day last week, a Mr. W. L. Smith, while walking over a tract of land belonging to Mr. A. J. Harford, found at a place where some workmen were engaged in laying out some old fortifications, a cigar box containing one hundred silver fifty cent pieces. The owner of the land, says the Clarke Journal, states that other money has been found there, and he is the impression that a natural made to him during the war by a Yankee, that $300,000 were buried in he fortifications, is about to be realized.

ACCIDENTS.

AT CINCINNATI, on Monday, Geo. S. & J. McGroarty closed four distilleries, as follows: Thos. McGehee's, Dodsworth's, and J. Eberhardt's, all on the canal, and C. WHEN ascertaining the voters at Springfield, Greene county, Mo., a few days since, one man who had served three years in the Federal army, was challenged for disloyalty. One "loyal" gentleman, who had sworn to the loyalty of a man in 1865, and all through the war, now swore he was disloyal, because the new constitution was not adopted when he swore he was loyal. It makes a deal of difference in regard to a man's "loyalty," when the inquiry is made as to whether he intends to vote the Radical ticket or not.

ONE NIGHT recently, Mr. William Inks and son, of Polk county, Mo., were on the watch for expected horse thieves. It was arranged that the father should go into the stable, and remain there until some one attempted to make an entrance, and that the son should remain outside at another point and fire upon whatever looked suspicious. The son stood at his post. The father became tired and left the stable, and as he approached his son, the latter, ignorant as to who he was, fired and instantly killed the former. The deceased was regarded as a reputable and worthy citizen.

A SORROWFUL incidence but serious affair in the shape of a duel, occurred at New Castle, in Newton county, Missouri, recently, between an Indian and a negro. It seems that the Indian had asked the privilege of looking at a pistol in possession of the negro. The latter refused, whereupon the former challenged him to "shoot it out" with him. The negro agreed, and the Indian measured off ten paces, wheeled, gave the word to fire, and out the first shot, wounding the negro in the stomach. Three shots were fired by the Indian and two by the negro. Both parties disclaim having been angry, and the negro probably thought the Indian was merely joking, until he fired. Physicians were unable to find the location of the ball, and it was thought the negro will not recover. The Indian was taken to Neosho and lodged in jail.

THE VICKSBURG Times, of the 22d instant, gives the particulars of a recent murder of a family at Omega Landing, on the Mississippi river. Four negroes, it appears, determined to kill a man named Keenan, for the purpose of obtaining some money they supposed he had just received for a lot of cotton. On the 14th instant, as Keenan left the landing, he was shot by one of the negroes. They then proceeded to search their victim, but found nothing in his pockets, and consequently determined to visit his house. Arrived there, they killed Keenan's wife and son with an ax, and then tied a daughter, a little girl, to a bed, and set it on fire. The murderers were pursued, and, after a long pursuit, two of them were captured. While the officers were conveying them to Vicksburg, on Monday, one was shot to death by the guard, and the other, a mulatto named Gilliflower, who is the flower of the flock, in point of vivacity and genuine artless humor, whose songs were repeatedly encored, and in her fascinating manner, she completely charmed the audience. A bright future lies before Miss Kimball. We here yet to see her peer as a comedienne and vocalist. The coal stirring French song, entitled "Ho Kloo," is a feature in itself of this great performance. The scenes are from the hands of master artists, and were procured at great expense. The orchestra deserves especial mention, for it is composed of first-class musicians, and their performance is truly delightful. The machinery is now in smooth working order, and everything moves like clock-work. The French fancy dances and the "Can Can" dance are entirely new to this section, and all unite in pronouncing them the most fascinating of any ever brought out in America. We expect to see a crowded house to-night.

CITY CHARTER CONVENTION.

Fifth Ward.

At a meeting of the citizens of the Fifth Ward, held at Beck s Hall last night, Hon. J. S. Lithgow and Mr. Charles Bremaker were nominated as delegates to the Charter Convention. They are both practical and experienced business men, and will be in every way fit representatives of the sectional interests of the city. A convention composed of men with this character and capacity, cannot fail to make a charter that will conduce to the welfare of Louisville and prove acceptable to the people.

Ninth Ward.

The solid and substantial men of the Ninth ward here, are advised, unfortunately united upon John Bowser and Mr. B. S. Griswold as candidates for delegates to the Charter Convention, from that ward. It would not be in their power to select gentlemen who will serve them with more zeal and ability.

Twelfth Ward Club.

This club met last night at the A. Y. Johnson engine house, and elected Hon. D McClure and Judge E. B. Craig as candidates for delegates to the Charter Convention.

Fifth Ward Meeting.

The Democrats of the Fifth Ward met last night at Beck's Hall, for the purpose of nominating two delegates to the Charter Convention, the motion, Lyndsten Cosby, Esq., was elected Chairman and H. Cosby Secretary.

Various gentlemen were put in nomination for delegates, and among others Messrs. Lyttleton Brooks and T. K. Worsham, the latter gentleman, however, peremptorily declined, for personal reasons.

A ballot being had, the result was the choice of James S. Lithgow and Charles Bremaker as delegates from the Fifth Ward.

To the Editor of the Louisville Courier:

One of the best men in the city to frame our charter is S. P. Browder, of the Fourth ward. He should be specially selected for the position of attending to the school interests. His many friends will support him and he is understood to be willing to accept the position. It is hoped that you will announce him as a candidate from the FOURTH WARD.

Third Ward.

To the Editor of the Louisville Courier:

You will oblige the voters of the Third ward by announcing Mr. Jas. Russell and Mr. C. J. Bancagiglia as candidates for delegates to the Charter Convention. They are gentlemen of worth, character and capacity, and will be faithful to the interests of the city. VOTERS.

Card from T. Orvenll, Esq.

To the Editor of the Louisville Courier:

I see in your paper of this morning that I am announced as a candidate for the Charter Convention. I am not a candidate, and must respectfully decline the call of my friends. I will necessarily absent from the city a greater portion of my time while acting as Commissioner, and as a member, could not attend the meetings of the convention. Otherwise I would cheerfully accept the call. T. OVERALL.

James Trabue and John Roberts.

To the Editor of the Louisville Courier:

Please announce as candidates from the Eighth ward for the Charter Convention James Trabue, Esq., and John Roberts, Esq. These gentlemen will be supported by the voters of the ward, and will reflect credit upon the city by their intelligence in the convention. EIGHTH WARD.

A communication from some citizens of the Ninth Ward, warmly commending the selection of Messrs. Bowser and Griswold as candidates for delegates to the Charter Convention, was accidentally left last night after it had been sent to the printer. This will explain the cause of its non-appearance.

J. E. Prather, Esq., requests us to state that it is not to be in order to accept the nomination as delegate to the charter convention from the Ninth Ward.

[For the Louisville Courier.]

Washington County.

Whereas, in February last, at a regular convention of the Democratic party, held in the court-house in Springfield, on County Court day, after due notice of the call of this committee, delegates were appointed to represent the Democracy of this county for the Hon. Geo. W. Kavanaugh as candidate for Circuit Court Judge, and Col. R. Thurman, as candidate for Commonwealth's Attorney for this Judicial District. It is now the opinion of this committee that an adjournment of said convention or conventions is necessary, and the delegation appointed at said former convention, is hereby authorized to represent this county. It is requested to attend the district convention called to nominate candidates for Circuit Judge and Commonwealth's Attorney for this district, to be held at Lebanon, Marion county, on the 16th day of May next, and cast the votes of this county in said convention. By order of the Democratic committee.

JAMES R. HUGHES,
April 27, 1868. Chairman of the Committee.

A Western paper say: "Our members in Congress has made a great speech—one of his very best. It was written for him by a graduate of this office, and the matter and delivery do credit to both parties."

Two sketches by Rosa Bonheur have been sold in Paris for $900.

BARREN AND OTHER COUNTY ITEMS.

[Reported for the Louisville Courier.]

GLASGOW, KY., April 28, 1868.

The town has resumed the usual quietude which recently was so suddenly broken by the Koklux Klan excitement. The "Reds" and negroes finding, after the lapse of several days, that the Koklux were not going to destroy them, have put on a look of cheerfulness that contrasts strangely with their hagridness of a week ago.

MAJ. P. H. LESLIE

was, by the meetings of the Democracy in this and in Hart county, recommended to the Democratic Convention, to be held the first Monday in June next at Edmonton, Metcalfe county, for the office of Circuit Judge of this district.

Gen. Joseph H Lewis was the first choice of the people, but preferring the retirement of a private life, the recommendations of the meeting was given to that true gentleman and able jurist, Major P. H. Leslie.

THE LEVEE LEAGUE

a few nights before the advent of the Koklux, organized here. Nothing but low negroes and bobtailed rats. The "leaders" were of negroes and "rads" holding stock, belong to the organization. It is known where they meet.

DEFAULTING SCRIPPS.

The sheriffs, James Batty, of Monroe county, and J. R. Butler, of Allen, have defaulted to a large amount; the sheriff of Monroe for 10,000 dollars, and the sheriff of Allen for a much larger sum.

Our worthy sheriff, A. P Childress, has been instructed by the State auditor to "settle" the affairs of these two worthies, and no well has he attended to it that he has collected $3,500 from the notorious John Frame, who was that man security for John Batty. It is needless to add these defaulting sheriffs are members of the Radical party.

TO BE HUNG.

A negro of Monroeville, Hart county, last Wednesday, was convicted of murder in the first degree, and sentenced to be hung. The negro killed a man named Bell, a near neighbor of the negroes, which so enraged the parent that he whipped his son to death.

OIL.

Is still passing through town in large quantities on its way to the railroad.

A LECTURE

on Odd Fellowship was given by Prof. Williams, of Horse Cave, Hart county, at the Baptist church, in this place, on the night of the 24th inst.

the noble surgeon of the Confederate Kentucky Brigade, in Hood's army, has left his former place of residence, which he changed for the more salubrious climate of South Carolina. That the Doctor's shadow may never be less in the wish of all.

in this section is not so badly injured as was thought a few days ago, but some loafing there will be quite a plenty of peaches and other smaller fruit, and an abundance of apples.

KENTUCKY NEWS.

[From the Frankfort Yeoman of the 25th.]

KENTUCKY MILITARY INSTITUTE.—We are informed by Colonel R. T. P. Allen, the superintendent, that the annual examinations of the cadets of the above named institution will begin on Wednesday, May 20, next, and to continue until Wednesday, June 3d, inclusive. On Thursday, June 4th, the annual military exercises will take place, on which occasion the eloquent Methodist Divine, R. A. Holland, will deliver the literary address before the cadets. Colonel Allen will be much gratified to have a numerous attendance upon the examination exercises, as also on the occasion of the commencement.

SUICIDE.—We learned by a private dispatch on Sunday that Mr. Freer, a resident of Hanover, Henry county, committed suicide by shooting himself through the head. Mr. Freer was formerly Mr Forno has relations in this city, and married a daughter of Mr. Lewis Woodridge, former proprietor of this county. His many relatives and friends among us will regret to hear of his untimely end.

[From the Lexington Statesman of the 25th.]

JAIL DELIVERY.—The prisoners confined in the jail of this county, on Friday night last, between ten and eleven o'clock, by means of tools surreptitiously brought to them, effected their escape from the jail. It was discovered before morning and took them again, thus arresting the triumphs of the jailer and making them more closely confined than ever. It appears that no one save five prisoners in the jail at the time was Jas. Lapp, a notorious horse thief, who has committed five jail deliveries. The others were the armors of that region, and three negroes charged with felony. A negro sentenced to fifteen days in the workhouse for petit larceny, succeeded in leaving the jail. One hundred dollars is offered for the arrest of Lapp, and twenty-five dollars each for the others.

The sentence of Capt. Charles H. Brockinridge, late of the 7 S A., who died of yellow fever last August, at Mobile bay, will reach the city to-day at 11 o'clock, and be conveyed to the cemetery at once, for burial.

CLARK COUNTY voted in primary elections on Saturday last. Connell for Circuit Judge carried the county by a large majority. Thomas and Connell for Judge and Jones for Commonwealth's Attorney. Chenault carried several precincts for Judge and Jones for Attorney. The race between Thomas and Chenault for Judge, and between Jones and Williams for Attorney.

The PRESIDENT of the Shakespeare neighborhood in this county, has called a meeting of the citizens of that section for the purpose of effecting a permanent organization to prevent if possible the repeated depredations of which they are almost nightly victims. Let the thieves beware of Shakespeare, &c. They propose to give a large reward to any person—white or black—who will give such information as will lead to the conviction of any thieves. We trust their efforts will be successful.

[From the McMinnville Times.]

A CURIOSITY.—Our friend L. W. Clark, living ten miles west of this place, across Caney creek, informs us that his wife, a few mornings since, arose before day for the purpose of putting on the coffee for breakfast, discovered inside the stove she had broken another symmetrically formed shell, with each compartment containing an egg, the shell which she had broken rendered only the crust. This is a strange phenomenon, and something we have been unable to account for. Can any of our readers give a solution?

THE WHEAT crop in this county is the more promising now than any one, six weeks ago. Insects it would be—the heavy freezes during the winter not injuring it so badly as the farmers anticipated.

It is feared that the tobacco plants have been greatly injured by the recent frosts. The farmers have made a heavy crop, and to lose the plants last, it will almost break up the county.

Jack Finney has not treated as quite so bad as first, it is to be hoped that he will have fruit of all kinds sufficient to supply the wants of the people, provided we have no more frost.

Another Swing Around the Circle.

[From the Washington Star for Cincinnati Gazette (Radical.)]

While prominent Johnsons men have of late been loud in their assertions that the President is sure to be acquitted, it is known that quite a number of them believe at the same time that a change for the better in the condition of affairs in connection with the character of a great martyr. The first stepping place is to be Baltimore, the next Philadelphia, the next New York. From that point the future course is to be determined by the success attending the expedition. For the last day or two the Maryland Conservatives are known to have been quite busy. To night a private dispatch to this office, from a well informed source in Baltimore, states that the Conservatives there are busy making preparations for a grand procession to escort of Johnson through the city on his way to Greenville, Tenn.

A SENSATION.

In connection with the action of the Senate in executive session on the message of the President removing Secretary Stanton, it was transpired that Senator Yates moved to substitute for the proposition, which was passed, the following:

Resolved, That the removal of Edwin M. Stanton, Secretary of War, and the appointment of a Secretary of War to perform during the recess of the Senate, be communicated to the said Secretary Stanton, otherwise, and that he be disapproved of the cause and reasons for such removal. That Secretary of War not to surrender the office to any person whomsoever.

Hon. M. C. Kerr at De Pauw Hall.

It rarely happens that a public man receives such a welcome at the hands of his fellow citizens as was given to Mr. Kerr on Saturday night last, 25th inst., when he addressed the Democratic Club and other citizens of this place, at the Court-house. The house at the time of the meeting, but long before that hour the vast hall was literally packed and jammed with men from this and county, and anxious to hear Mr. Kerr on the all absorbing questions of national interest. At the appointed hour he took the stand, and in his usual modest, forcible, and clear manner talked for about an hour and a half, to the most intense upon which the great battle of this year is to be fought. The prominent themes upon which Mr Kerr dwelt in his speech were reconstruction and the financial questions. We only utter the voice of all who heard the speech when we say he portrayed the iniquities involved in the scheme in a masterly manner. His denunciation of the Congress that enacted and the impeachment were terrific, and the demonstrations of his audience showed that the vile schemes and its revolutionary authors were justly odious in their sight. The meeting was a complete success and inspired the conservatives here with new zeal.—[N. Albany Ledger.

THE PRESSURE UPON SENATORS

Browslow Threatens Fowler.

The Washington correspondent of the New York Herald says:

The strongest kind of pressure is still being brought to bear in order to secure success on the Radicals are to defeat nothing but an almost hopeless cause. John Conrade, of Missouri, has just received a private letter from Governor Brownlow, of Tennessee, in which the expected vote of Senator Fowler in favor of the impeachment was treated in no courtly terms. In this letter Governor Brownlow appeals to the latter's patriotism, and says that he will be unworthy of the confidence of his constituents if he votes for the acquittal of the President. He has not added a particle of strength to the Republican party in any section of the country, but on the contrary has destroyed it. On the ground of his own State, and Tennessee has not been good for some years. The Connecticut and Chicago elections are not encouraging. The thing to do is to make a timely change in our leadership. The people have had enough of Andrew Johnson and his failure before the convention. In a fortunate circumstance if we are wise enough to improve it to the utmost. There is but one way to improve it and that is to support Wade for vice-president. Benjamin F. Wade is the only other man who can be that candidate. Let us seize the opportunity and save the party.

There are other letters in relation to the matter, but I do not wish to be considered as to give them as blood quotations. They are the substance of the argument addressed to one of the acknowledged leaders of the Republican party in the Senate. The Senators are not content with the prospect that their vote will have no ad interim consequence of the White House, and possession of the Presidency, but are conditions as put forward by the Executive, and that the Senate will be called upon to act in the matter. If they had all the works to work in, they might reasonably entertain a hope of success. The fact that they are making a movement, and placing the President on the defensive stands, shows at least the strength of their convictions and the scope of their ambition.

Some of the Republican Senators are, I think, dissatisfied with the Ben Wade business. They have had no unpleasantness to encounter. The hotels swarm with expectant beggars here waiting for office under Wade, and they are the most pronounced impeachers in the country. They are accepted to approach Senators and ask their recommendations for office in case Wade turns up. They have learned about Wade, too, but to do this and more justice he has exerted of them a bit of his mind, and they are now in a state of depression, but only to display increased activity among the hayseed few who stand very near him. Mr. Wade's strong point is not diplomacy, and he has failed to enjoy a gratified surprise at his recent caps shy to maintain a decent degree of reserve.

The Arlington Estate.

[Washington correspondence N. Y. Journal of Commerce.]

If, during the progress of the recent rebellion, there occurred anything for which the authorities of the United States incurred deep disgrace, and in which they manifested a most hard and unfeeling spirit, it was the seizure and disregard for the City of Washington and its future interests in connection with one of the greatest and most enduring ornaments to the capital of the nation, and to the capital of the national capital, it was the deliberate appropriation of the beautiful, picturesque and universally admired property left by the hospitable and patriotic George Washington P. Custis, for his only child, who was the wife of Robert E. Lee, of the rebel army, a destruction but briefly described in the following article which I cull from the Washington Chronicle. It tells a little story of the manner in which the Union people of the South were made to the plunder allowed to be made of private personal effects formerly belonging to Gen. Washington, many of which have never since been heard of, and are not likely ever to be heard of again, so that they are utterly lost to the country to which they belonged to the United States by virtue of purchase or tax sale, is a more pretense, and supplies no justification for the vandalism, waste of the whole property left by the testator, and was perpetrated "by authority." The tax sale was resulted of because the property was known to be not subject to confiscation. Every intelligent business man well understood that the tax sale, under the circumstances, possess no validity in law against parties debarred by sufficient excuse from the opportunity of redemption, and that the rights of minor heirs cannot thus be sacrificed. But the property of a citizen and minor children, not that of General Lee, and ordinary magnanimity, not to say decency, would have suggested to officials of the United States the propriety of some respect to the proprieties due women and children, the duty of protecting from desecration the only large forest of any extent bordering the city, and the custody of grounds and buildings which were always open and ready to extend private hospitality, but during a long series of years to all sections, associations, parties, or parties inclined to make use of their attractions. I know not who is responsible, but time will attach this work of unmitigated fire, ruthless destruction to the proper individual; while, for a century at least, to the visitor who may stand upon the site of the handsomest mansion he need only be said, "Here was."

[From the Washington Republican.]

ARLINGTON.—We understand that the Arlington estate is to be divided into small farms and sold to freedmen. A large portion of it is already in cultivation, and it is said that upwards of a thousand of the nation's dead. Another portion is a contraband settlers' cemetery, where are buried over two thousand of the colored people who have come to reconstruct and vent covering the remains of a thousand or two soldiers whose remains could not be identified. The house where lee once resided is to be used as a hospital for the freedmen and the Capitol Hospital. No comment is necessary on the plan of the Public Buildings and Grounds and the Capitol Hospital. To remove, piece by piece, the Washington and Custis relics of the colonial and revolutionary era but adorn the walls of a freedmen's hospital is a novel.

The whole will no doubt be retained by the Government, and we doubt whether Gen. Lee has any great desire to live in the house of his late military enemy, to whom the circumstances of war have brought such wonderful changes.

During Scoundrelism by Lincoln county—Card from Mr. George W. Miller.

CAVE ORCHARD, KY., April 24th 1868.

To all Whom it May Concern:

I, G. W. Miller, wish to make some statements in relation to the condition of things in Lincoln county, Ky. I live at Cave Orchard, Ky., where I was raised by my grandfather, John Funk, and raised to hard work on the farm, and can still bring me a farm. I married one of my daughters, and when commenced at a wife and two children, am about twenty-five years old, known to every body in this community.

A few days after the 25th inst. I received the following note, requiring to come home For eyrite, but mailed at Mackenzburg.

"GEORGE MILLER—You have till the 25th of this month to send up your effects and leave for Kentucky or other parts, and if you

I do not think the man that wrote the note lives either at Perryville or Millerbsburg. Neither do I think it to from any band of guerrillas, and what do not think I have done anything to deserve the note. I do not think I have never discovered the laws of the land, nor transcended upon the rights of any body. The only thing that I can think of, some persons envy me I have any, and one way to get me away is to make it known it be wishes to court me, and will try to satisfy him in some way. I went out to my housework as usual, thinking it was some one who wished to secure me, and on the 25th inst. the day I was notified to leave, I endeavored my per son by taking out the cows and hitching my horse, tying the fire in a mattress. It was discovered at daylight burning out of the window, when my family were called from bed. Also on Tuesday that my household and kitchen furniture, and nothing for that if I could know the coward that done the deed. Also on Tuesday that night the house was fired, but was put out by myself and the neighbors, and the curtains and bed clothes in a blaze in the morning set fire to my stable and cribs, burning both. There was about 40 to 50 barrels of corn in the crib. No one knows who were the guilty parties, but a man was seen about 150 yards off by a lady in the yard, seen to step into the bushes and mount his horse and ride toward Cave Orchard. He was a tall man, with black or red whiskers. I will give $500 reward for the scoundrel that done the deed or deeds.

I now wish to tell the parties that I do not expect to leave the State, and have determined to leave her. I desire to live in peace with and enjoy the good will of men, and ask protection, and will not go as the coward who send me the note I will wage my cause to hell.

GEORGE W. MILLER.

The Radical Pack Already in a Snarl About the Offices.

Mr. Halstead, one of the most zealous Republicans, writes as follows to his paper, the Cincinnati Commercial:

WASHINGTON, April 24, 1868.

A good many times within a few years I have had occasion to express apprehensions that the Radicals were so persevering in extravagant measures that, instead of accomplishing all the desirable objects of their ambition, they would reason the Democratic party to power in such manner as to do the greatest possible mischief. I have also had occasion to remind gentlemen of the Radical persuasion who have insisted upon leaving the elements of combination out of the work of reconstruction in the South, that it was of the first consequence to retain political power in the North, that if the Republicans could hold the North they were safe; that if they lost the North, Southern black States would not save them.

Within a few days it has been generally believed here that, early in the month of May, Andrew Johnson would be driven from the White House, and Ben Wade duly inaugurated acting President of the United States. There has been prevalent, for some months, an impression that General Grant would certainly be the manager of the Republican party at Chicago. The Ben Wadeites have already smacked their lips over the next ten months, and calculated that it would take Grant at least two months to get under way, so that if the Senate were prompt and Wade in a hurry, they really would have possession for one year, and now they are indorsing a sharp practice for the whole four years succeeding the next fourth of March.

I do not write confidently, why can I say that the calculations, who thus far have had every thing their own way in Congress, are manifesting dissatisfaction with Grant's nomination, and that they have not been holding consultations and pursuing out feelers, with the view of even yet beating Grant with Ben Wade at Chicago. The reason is obvious. They know Grant is not one of them.

They feel that he has not a Radical hour in his body politic—that he is not in sympathy with their extreme and violent views and is not likely to be easily managed by any political combination of cowards; and they have come to consider their dependence upon him.

There was then no advance made to a prominent Republican politician, who has a long-standing reputation, and been nearer the core coast than the latter, on the subject of the installation of a general movement to drop Grant and take up Wade. The line of argument was something like this: "Grant has been nominated by the Democrats, and it is plain that his apparent candidacy has not been productive of the slightest popular enthusiasm. He has not added a particle of strength to the Republican party in any section of the country. On the contrary he has, and have not been good for some years. The Connecticut and Chicago elections are not encouraging. The thing to do is to make a timely change in our leadership. The people have had enough of Andrew Johnson and his failure before the convention. In a fortunate circumstance if we are wise enough to improve it to the utmost. There is but one way to improve it and that is to support Wade for vice-president. Benjamin F. Wade is the only other man who can be that candidate. Let us seize the opportunity and save the party."

There are other letters in relation to the matter, but I do not wish to be considered as to give them as blood quotations. They are the substance of the argument addressed to one of the acknowledged leaders of the Republican party in the Senate. The Senators are not content with the prospect that their vote will have no ad interim consequence of the White House, and possession of the Presidency, but are conditions as put forward by the Executive, and that the Senate will be called upon to act in the matter. If they had all the works to work in, they might reasonably entertain a hope of success. The fact that they are making a movement, and placing the President on the defensive stands, shows at least the strength of their convictions and the scope of their ambition.

Some of the Republican Senators are, I think, dissatisfied with the Ben Wade business. They have had no unpleasantness to encounter. The hotels swarm with expectant beggars here waiting for office under Wade, and they are the most pronounced impeachers in the country. They are accepted to approach Senators and ask their recommendations for office in case Wade turns up. They have learned about Wade, too, but to do this and more justice he has exerted of them a bit of his mind, and they are now in a state of depression, but only to display increased activity among the hayseed few who stand very near him. Mr. Wade's strong point is not diplomacy, and he has failed to enjoy a gratified surprise at his recent caps shy to maintain a decent degree of reserve.

LOVE IN THE COUNTRY.

A Romantic Affair in Hopkins County.

It is Done up in Original Style in Prose and Poetry.

We find the following in the Madisonville (Ky.) Times, of April 23d:

AN ELOPEMENT.

SOMETHING OUT OF THE USUAL ORDER OF THINGS IN THIS LOCALITY.

On Tuesday night last, the 14th inst., Mr. L. W Gatlin, living ten miles south of this place, becoming enamored of the wife of Mr. Virginius Bailey, a neighbor to his, eloped with her, and his unprofitable to name unknown. Mr. Bailey and his tenant with had been living together for the last seven or eight years upon the most amicable terms—never a word passing between them that was calculated, in the slightest degree, to ruffle their feelings or mar the harmony of the domestic hearth, and the only reason she assigns for leaving one home pleasure it was over to go with Gatlin was that she had loved him better than any human being. Oh, thou unfathomable woman. Mrs. Dosher Bailey left one little—dear little Maddock—who will no more be the recipient of fond caresses from a mother—what magic in the name of mother! It seems to us that it must be a strange infatuation that would thus induce a mother to desert her darling offspring.

Gatlin's reasons for leaving one who had never given offense, is about the same as that of Mrs. Bailey—that he did not love his wife as he should, and loved his neighbor's better. Poor depraved human nature, we are ever coveting something that belongs to some one else. Gatlin left with his unoffending wife two little boys, with her to bear the weight of his disgraceful conduct. He took with him $4,000 belonging to a neighbor, who was living with him, thus adding theft to the great sin of housekeeping after that which belonged to his neighbor.

There is a day of reckoning in store for them which will sooner or later overtake them. Below we give, just as we received them, a letter from Gatlin to his wife, which is decidedly the coolest and most impudent production that we have read lately, and one from Mrs. Bailey to her husband, which is the most amusing. Here they are:

DEAR WIFE—I take the opportunity of writing you a few lines to let you know my whereabouts. I am married to Miss Bailey. The reason for leaving is short and soon told. I am young Wife and that I love better than any body else on the ear

WEDNESDAY MORNING, -- APRIL 29, 1868.

The Elizabethtown and Paducah Railroad Subscription.

By the provisions of the ordinance, the voters of Louisville will be called to vote on Saturday upon the proposition that the city shall subscribe one million of dollars toward the construction of the proposed railroad from Elizabethtown to Paducah. The importance of this road to the future prosperity of Louisville has been fully discussed in these columns, as well as the merits of the various routes proposed.

There are few intelligent citizens of Louisville who do not recognize the advantages which our city has derived from her railroad connections. She has subscribed liberally to secure these connections, and she has already realized a fair return for her investments. But the system of roads which is to make her one of the great cities of the West is not yet completed, and she must keep on in the enlightened path which she has so long pursued. When she has finished the road to Cincinnati, now in process of construction; the road to Knoxville which will connect her with the ocean at Norfolk, several hundred miles shorter than any other to the sea coast, and the road to Paducah from Elizabethtown, which will give her quick communication with the Mississippi river, she will have accomplished much of all that is necessary to insure her the trade of the Southwest and West.

The proposed road runs through one of the richest mineral and agricultural regions in the West. Seventy miles from Elizabethtown it strikes inexhaustible coal fields, which will supply us with cheap fuel for household and manufacturing purposes forever. Farther on the hills are filled with the most valuable iron ores, while the agricultural resources of the country along the entire line are equal to those of any section of this State or any other.

In addition to these important considerations, the construction of this road is to Louisville a measure of self-protection. Two roads are already projected from the South to the Ohio river, west of us, which will, unless this road is built, do the trade of Louisville inalienable mischief. One from Nashville to Henderson and Evansville, and the other from Russellville, a point upon the Louisville and Nashville road, in Logan county, to Owensboro. On the first-named of these roads the work is rapidly progressing. Already the trains are running to Hopkinsville, in Christian county, and from the Ohio river much work has already been done. It is not improbable that this road, under the management of Mr. Jerry Boyle, who is its President, will be running cars from the Cumberland to the Ohio river within the next eighteen months. This road cuts through the finest tobacco region in the State, from which Louisville has derived much of her trade in this line. It runs through the counties of Todd, Christian and Hopkins, which are among the most productive of the tobacco region. It is certain that when the Nashville and Henderson road is completed that much of the tobacco which has heretofore been brought to this city from these counties will go either to Nashville, Henderson, or Clarksville. The same may be said of the proposed road from Russellville to Owensboro, which runs through the counties of Logan, Muhlenburg, Ohio, and Daviess. The only antidote for the damage which these proposed roads are likely to inflict upon Louisville is the Elizabethtown and Paducah road. They run from north to south. It runs from east to west, crossing both roads.

It will be convenient to the entire section through which both of these other roads run, and will protect our city from the damaging effects which would otherwise result from their construction, besides giving us the advantage of the exhaustless coal fields and iron mines and forests upon the line.

Louisville has never been burdened by any of the subscriptions to railroads she has made. They have all paid the interest upon the debt contracted and shown their ability to pay the principal of the debt when-ever it falls due. Why then should our people hesitate to vote for this subscription to one of the most important enterprises ever projected in the State? It will advance our prosperity; increase our facilities for manufacturing; reduce the price of our fuel; make us independent in this respect of Pittsburg, low water and ice; protect us against the ruinous consequences of the construction of cross lines of roads to the Ohio river, and build up Louisville as a great manufacturing and commercial city, the rival of any in the west.

The managers of the Louisville and Nashville road, all must admit, have shown their sagacity in the management of that road. They have taken hold of this enterprise and will embark both their capital and active interest in its construction. They have seen the surveys and estimates of the cost, the probabilities of profit, and know what they are about. They fully understand that Evansville and other points upon the Ohio river are enjoying the benefits of a large trade, which belongs legitimately to Louisville, and that the construction of the road is the only plan by which that trade can be regained. They see that the investment will be a safe one, that profit must result, that the prosperity of Louisville will be advanced, and that the improvement is one which the best interests of the State requires.

The company is organized in of the highest responsibility. The President, Mr. Thomas, of Elizabethtown, is a gentleman of sterling integrity and of the highest character, and has the reputation of possessing the finest business qualifications. The directors too are all unexceptionable men, of intelligence and business qualifications. The surveys which have been made by four different companies of engineers have been thorough and exhaustive. The profile of the different routes which have been surveyed show that the road is practicable and easy of construction and that it can be built at a moderate cost. The connections it will make, and the richness of the country through which it runs make it certain that it will be a profitable road, and every body who has paid the slightest attention to the subject fully understands that it will prove an important tributary to the trade and prosperity of Louisville. Like other roads to which Louisville has subscribed it will be self-supporting, and will not be a weight upon the tax-payers of the city. The subscription will practically prove no addition to our debt, nor will it result in any increase of taxation. It is therefore the duty of every voter in Louisville who has the interests of the city at heart, who desires to increase its wealth and population, to vote for this subscription on Saturday. We trust that the proposition will be carried by an overwhelming majority. The policy of building railroads has made Louisville what it is, and if we would not see her take the downward road we must adhere to that policy and go on as we commenced.

Action of the Presbytery of, East Hanover, Va.

The Rev. T. S. Maury, now of Kentucky, having lately left the Presbyterian Church, has been cited before a special session of the Presbytery, to meet at Richmond, Virginia, on the 13th of May, to show cause why he shall not be deposed from his office. The following is the "declaration" which the Presbytery assign as the cause of this citation.

REV. T. S. MAURY'S DECLARATION.

In the Protestant churches slow-divine, good works, Monkish donations for the churches health, growth, and earthly glory are virtually put in the stead of Christ's righteousness to the justification of a sinner. Believers are thus led captive to the slavery of the law: and the church of God is banished and betrayed even to the brink of apostacy from the Lord who bought it. Sometimes, gravely, sound doctrine, holds-out in warning the sacredly, and proclaiming the mystery of the Gospel are supplanted, in the clergy by carnal, legalistic, odious science of reasoned positivity: the Church "having men's persons in admiration," as Jude, the servant of Jesus Christ, foretold should be "in the last time."

Personal holiness and non-conformity to the world are neither demanded or expected of those admitted with full fellowship to the Church; much less, made the end of their existence and "the light" of a christian believer's faith. The Protestant visible churches, by unconscious degrees, have pressed and put away "the offence of the cross of Christ," as the scripture declares, "only lest they should suffer persecution."

They have officially cut out of God's word many of its most lively and vital teachings, e. g. The doctrines of the new birth: of God's sovereign election, predestination, and reprobation of men: of justification by faith only, the enmity between them and all unregeneracy: of the present captivity, the immediate and final perseverance of all the saints; of the death and mediation of Christ for his elect flock only, of the curse and everlasting damnation of all flesh in Adam and their spiritual to well as legal death in sin: the witness of God's spirit with all truly justified others, warning in them all peace, quietness and assurance forever: and, while their consent not to those wholesome and necessary words, even the words of our Lord Jesus Christ, they substitute for them many speculative, theological and scholastic inventions of their own brain, and "the words of men."

God's word alone is no longer held by Protestant churches of sole and supreme authority, neither in the doctrines, and consequently, not in the practical duties of godliness. And the day described by the Prophet Isaiah, is again realized in the case when "the people" draw near to God with their mouth and honor Him with their lips do honor me, but their have removed their heart far from me, and their fear toward me is taught by the precept of men."

The time foretold is come when the churches "will not endure sound doctrine, but heap to them selves teachers after their own desires" or people does.

Protestant theologians, divines and professors of divinity in high places of honor in the church, do not aim to involve the Scriptures to the fear of their own evangelical sophisms, metaphysical dreamings and scholastic systems, and have taught churches which, however they would have plucked out their own eyes for the truth's sake, like the Galatians, "so more dearly" even removed from the grace of Christ": here to accept all to have "another gospel, which is not another."

The latter, learned Protestant doctors and ecclesiastics, who love to have the pre-eminence in the churches, are to them now what the Rabbis, Scribes and Doctors of the Law were to Israel in the days of our Lord Jesus Christ and his Apostles, (as our Lord said) "they neither go into the kingdom of heaven them-selves, neither suffer they them that are entering to go in."

Multitudes are daily added to the churches on profession, not regarding whether they are "of such as shall be saved." And this to permitted and encouraged by the churches, in defiance of the Almighty's threats, as he by Ezekiel the Prophet, (as our Lord said) "they neither go into the kingdom of heaven them.

[Special Telegraphic Correspondence of the Louisville Courier.]

AMENDMENT TO THE RULES PROPOSED.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—Sumner fearing that if the Senate convict the President it will not agree to disqualify him, proposed an amendment to the rules that a bare majority of the members be sufficient for that purpose. It will be rejected.

Mr Evarts spoke for two hours, taking a broad and comprehensive view of all the questions, and laying down the foundation for his argument. His description of the powers of the different departments of the Government, personifying them and bringing them all within the walls of the Senate chamber where there is a deadly strife, was a picture of rare grandeur and beauty. The powers and duty of the President to defend and preserve the Constitution were clearly stated. He referred to caustic terms to Congress with its repeated exaggerated and almost omnipotent pretensions far exceeding its scope of duties. He pointed out the obligations of the Senate in court, their delicate and important functions in the trial and what was due to impartial justice, their country, their oaths and their God. This portion of his remarks was uttered with a weight and solemnity which powerfully impressed all who heard him.

IMPEACHMENT EXPOSED.

Before any evidence is shown and letters, exposed its factious selfishness, its want of principle and truth, and made its partisan measure disputable in the eyes of all. In the recent extract from Judge Spencer's speech in Judge Peck's case, where he said in appearing in it he would scorn to bring the spirit of party before an august body of Senators.

BUTLER DISMAYED.

This was too much for Butler even, and that worthy left the chamber in dismay.

THE PRESIDENT'S OFFICE.

He pictured the condition of the President's office if Johnson is deposed, and said the Constitution never contemplated that it should be filled by any one executing he was elected by the people. Senators are discussing the point particularly to-night, and, in the event of Johnson's removal, it is not improbable that the present law will be amended so as to have an election for President at an early day. Some Senators hold that the present exigencies of the country demand it.

WADE'S ELIGIBILITY.

In this connection the doubt of Wade's eligibility as successor as not being an officer of the Government within the meaning of the law was discussed.

It is known the Chief Justice has said there is grave doubts of it, and this is urged as an additional reason for filling the office in the contingency named by a general election.

CHASE.

There is authority for stating that in view of the alarming strides of the Radicals toward despotism Chief Justice Chase has said it was time every lover of constitutional liberty should band together against the Centralizationists.

A SCENE.

Quite a scene occurred between Butler and Judge Nelson in court relative to the statements about Alta Vela. Judge Black and his withdrawal from the President's counsel. The words falsehoods and calumny were handed freely, and Nelson intimated that this was not the place to settle personal matters.

40th CONGRESS—FIRST SESSION.

SENATE..... WASHINGTON, April 28.

When the Court had been opened in due form Mr. Sumner said: "I send to the Chair an amendment to the order of the Senate upon the trial of impeachment. When that has been read, if there be any objection, I will ask that it go over until the close of the argument, and take its place with other matters that will come up at that time."

The amendment was read, as follows:

Whereas it is provided in the Constitution of the United States that on a trial of impeachment by the Senate no person shall be convicted without the concurring of two-thirds of the members present, but this requirement of two-thirds is not extended to the judgment in such trials which remains subject to the general law that a majority govern; therefore, in order to remove any doubt thereupon, it is ordered that any question which may arise with regard to the judgment shall be determined by a majority of the members present.

Mr. DAVIS objected, and the Chief Justice said it would lie over.

Manager WILLIAMS then at 12:15 resumed his argument. After recapitulating his position of yesterday he took up the subject of the President's alleged justification by reason of advice given him by his Cabinet. If he held the President could not shield himself behind the opinions of his own creatures whose sentiments were prompted by fear of losing their positions.

He characterized the Cabinet, in its newly assumed functions, as a tongue growth, which sought to make itself a directory. He argued it members of the Cabinet intended to advise the President on questions of general policy, and shield him from responsibility for his actions, they would have been made independent of his control. He claimed that the President had failed to show any sufficient cause for his desire to remove Mr. Stanton. True he was a thorn in his side, but so was Congress, and so was Grant and every loyal man.

Mr. Wilson held that the wanton removal of a meritorious officer from motives of personal dislike is of itself sufficient warrant for impeachment. He referred to the President's failure to commence legal proceedings which he maintained would not have availed his purpose, which was to have an interregnum wherein his own will could be supreme.

He then gave a satirical and humorous description of the conduct of General Thomas, on the 21st and 22d of February, including his appearance at the manoeuvres.

With regard to the defense set up by the President, that he has a right to resist and bring to a judicial decision laws he considers unconstitutional, Mr. Williams maintained that no provision of the Constitution required such a confirmation, and that extreme cases of necessity alone were not supposable. He would admit that the Senate in the sitting as a court, but it was a court holding exclusive jurisdiction, which could decide upon the whole matter according to his own views, guided, but not bound, by precedents and laws.

Mr. Williams then argued the suspension of Mr. Stanton was made under the tenure of office law, to which the President thereby recognized. He then maintained that the averment of evil intent was not necessary in this case as in all others it was inferred from the act itself.

Comparing the conduct of Mr. Johnson with that of James the Second, he said it only now remained to see whether the parallel would be completed. He contended that the safety of the people was the supreme law and was the only law by which this case should be properly tried. It was belittled by trivial legal technicalities, and he besought the Senate to take the larger view.

In regard to the eleventh article, he had not the heart to dwell on the disgraceful conduct which formed its subject. If the President, like his counsel, made merry over it, he could only say that Nero fiddled while Rome was burning, and one culprit would find in the Senate a censor more stern than Cato.

In conclusion, he said the result of the trial would determine whether the President or the Senate would go down; and, depicting a series of fearful consequences that would follow the acquittal, he closed by a picture of a glowing picture of peace, prosperity, and happiness to result from the President's conviction.

The Senate took recess.

On reassembling, Mr. Butler asked leave to make a personal explanation in regard to the Alta Vela matter, referred to by Mr Wilson, and read a written statement in which he condemned in very severe terms the introduction by Mr. Nelson of assertions and insinuations unsupported by evidence, and irrelevant to the case, and went on to relate the circumstances of his connection with the matter. He stated he gave Mr. Sharkey an opinion on the Alta Vela claim before impeachment was decided on, or before the President committed the act which gave rise to it, and had never heard of it afterwards, until published in the New York papers Mr. Logan also signed it, but the other signatures were affixed to the copy of his opinion long after the original was sent to the President. Neither he nor any of the other managers had any interest in the Alta Vela claim. The signatures were sent to the President in order to support him in doing what he had already declared his intention of doing.

Mr. BUTLER then read affidavits of Chancellor F. Black and Mr. Sheffler corroborating these assertions.

Mr. NELSON, by permission replied and reminded the Senate that the topic was not introduced by himself and claimed he had a right to vindicate his client from aspersions cast upon him by the other side. He had brought no accusation against the managers, and contended enmity that as the imputation made against him just now was unjustifiable and outrageous. He had supposed that the original opinion was like the copy and asked why he had not been questioned when he read the letters. If allowed, he would reproduce them to-morrow, and would show that the additional signatures were made after the trial had commenced, and were used by Judge Black to influence the President.

In the course of his remarks Mr. Nelson was called to order by Mr. Yates, and Mr. Logan stated that the signatures were affixed before the impeachment commenced.

Mr. NELSON said the letter could show.

Mr. EVARTS then at 2:30 rose and addressed the Senate and the Chief Justice in behalf of the President. His opening remarks had reference to the grave character of the cause and the impossibility of human foresight to measure the results which would flow from it. From these considerations he framed a strong appeal for circumspection and impartiality in its consideration.

Briefly reviewing the issues involved in the few impeachment trials which have taken place in our country, he spoke of their utter insignificance in comparison with the one now presented, and said he should call their attention to some of the probable results which would follow the decision either way. If the President is acquitted the Government will go on as before. Congress, the executive, and the judiciary will resume their proper functions to case of conviction disturbances of various kinds would arise. The branch of the government will be decreated of its prerogatives, and the President will be succeeded by a member of the body which deposed him. This he maintained was the trial of the constitution.

Referring to the Supreme Court as the respected, cherished guardian of the people's liberty, he alluded to Congress as having recently perverted the exercise of its rightful jurisdiction in defense of personal rights, and Congress was also attempting to overthrow a coordinate branch of the government, and the country looked to this trial for a verdict that would restrain the latter power within its proper limits. The oath taken by the President was not merely the common obligation faithfully to discharge the duties of his office but included the unique and sublime obligation to preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States that the people have formed, and they will adhere to the determination that that oath shall not be taken in vain. They are converts to no theories of Congressional omnipotence, and they will not consent that this sword of impeachment is drawn, they will wish to know what the crime is with which the President has been charged, and for which it is sought to depose him. They understand what treason and bribery are in all their ramifications, but on going through with all their list they are told that his crime is having removed a member of his Cabinet and are told it becomes a crime, according to Congress for the first time in the history of the Government has made it so. He undertook to make an ad interim Secretary of War, and now, by consequence, they are to have made for them an ad interim President. They also ascertain that no force can be employed, and no removal was made except on paper, and that for the purpose of procuring a decision of the Supreme Court, to prevent which vigor ous action was at once taken by those who bring the accusation.

In short, said Mr. Evarts, the people see that it is a case of a bare majority between Congress and the Constitution. They did not hold to the idea that the Constitution was made only for our infancy, but felt that it was to be the guide and bond of our maturest manhood, and were determined that no should continue to be the guardian of liberty.

Referring then to the position assumed by the managers that this tribunal is not a court, Mr. Evarts said it was the first time he ever knew a prosecutor to make the assertion. Then his case was coram non judice, but they probably felt that the only way to prevent their cause being turned out of Court was to turn the court out of the cause.

As to the English precedents adduced to show that this body is not a court, he said Parliament was the Supreme Court of the nation and that impeachment was only a part of its judicial functions, which view he supported by the authority of Chancellor Thurlow. If this is not an alter of justice it is merely alter of revenge. He said the managers had taken no pains to conceal the party spirit and party hate which had hurried through the preparations for this procedure, and read some declarations on the subject made by the managers to the Peck trial. He called attention to the words of one of the managers who spoke of the Senators as headsmen standing by the scaffold with their records ready, they having tried the culprit on the night of February 21—assertions which he characterized as insulting to the court, cruel and unwarranted. He read from the debates on the formation of the Constitution to show that the power to impeach and try the President was granted with hesitation to the Senate, and only because of the reliance placed upon their discretion of a judicial oath.

Mr. Evarts then dwelt on the tremendous power and meaning of the little words truth, oath, justice and duty, and appealed to the Senators to brace themselves by all their integrity truly and justly to discharge their oaths and perform their solemn duty.

At the conclusion of his eloquent exordium the court and Senate adjourned at 4:20.

LONDON, April 28.—It is said that General Sagbe's trial is suppressed for May 5. All the impeachment explosions prisoners, except the last, who was convicted, have been set at liberty. The trial of Burke, Cassidy and Shea commenced to-day, Judge Bowen presiding. The court house was crowded and great interest manifested. The counsel for the Crown were the same as in the case of the Clerkenwell explosionists. Those for the prisoners were as before. Greene, James, and McDonald for Burke; Lewis for Casey, and Peter for Shea. Mr. Jowen asked for a mixed jury for Burke, on the ground that he was an American. The counsel for the Crown objected, whereupon ground was for a change of venue was passed, signed by United States Minister Adams. The validity of the proof was argued when the case concluded its adjourning, and before the court reopened for a refused jury. The counsel for the Crown said the case against the prisoners was of infamy in making war against the Queen, which, under the act of 1848, was punishable by transportation for term ten to fifteen years, and then proceeded to open the case for the Crown.

The counsel for the Crown said they should read their case principally on the testimony of Delaney and Massey.

Cogan was sworn, and testified as follows: I knew the prisoner Burke in the United States. Burke was sent to Ireland to purchase arms in England for a rising in Ireland, afterward saw Burke and Shea in Liverpool, met them at a Fenian meeting; was with them when the attempt to rescue Kelly was planned; when the insurrection broke out in Ireland the principal English actors were to be fired and destroyed. Delaney corroborated his statements.

LETTER FROM GENERAL BOYLE.

A GIGANTIC ENTERPRISE.

Direct Railroad Communication Between the Lakes and the Gulf.

LOUISVILLE, KY., April 28, 1868.

Colonel D. Morgan, Nashville, Tennessee:

DEAR SIR—Your letter of 20th March, with enclosure, and on my return I was called away to Evansville on important business connected with my railroad. I have just returned again, and finding it will not be less late I come now to reply to the inquiries you make in regard to my road and its connections.

The Evansville, Henderson and Nashville Railroad, delivering directly to the west of Louisville, and connecting at Evansville with the Cumberland and Ohio rivers, running boats pour city through the States of Kentucky to Henderson, 111½ miles, and to Evansville, 168 miles.

By Evansville and Crawford with the Evansville and Terre Haute Railroad, connecting steam cars north to Terre Haute. This road is built to Reeds ville, twenty three miles east of north beyond Terre Haute, and a road is under way to the north to Logansport, and from there from a point on the road ten miles north of Terre Haute direct to Chicago via Danville, Illinois, called the Terre Haute, Danville and Chicago Railroad. This line of railroad from Evansville to Evansville, and to Chicago, at the head of Lake Michigan, passing through Vincennes, Terre Haute and Danville, and cross nearly with a line of railroad from Cairo to Chicago. When the latter line by the Nashville and Danville Railroad, northward, filling up the gap from Decatur to Montgomery, thence to Pensacola, on the Gulf of Mexico, will give us a line of railroad nearly straight from north to south, forming but a few miles from a line of longitude between ten and eleven west from Washington, passing from nearly the forty-second degree of latitude to the thirtieth degree of latitude. You will see by reference to the map that the longitude of Chicago is between ten and eleven west of Washington, and between eighty-seven and eighty-eight west of Greenwich, and near the forty-second degree of latitude, and Pensacola is situated between the same longitudinal lines and near the thirtieth degree of latitude.

You make mention and inquiry to regard to the proposed road from Evansville, in Hopkins county, Kentucky, on the line of the Evansville, Henderson, and Nashville Railroad to Hawesborough, on the Ohio river, in Daviess county, Kentucky, 30 miles, and from Hawesborough to Owensboro, on the Ohio river, 15 miles, and from Owensboro to Bowling Green, on the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, 30 miles. I believe some of the other counties have also by vote made donations of bonds and lands, and no doubt is entertained that all the counties will make appropriations. Evansville has voted three fifths of road will be built. The interest the Illinois Central Railroad has in it, the great advantage it will be to that road, it would seem ought to secure the building of the road. The interest of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, the Louisville and Nashville Railroad,
